

Philosophy of Worship in the Church, Part 2 – Psalm 95

Greg Stiekes, Pastor

As a believer, Christian worship is something that takes place in our heart, an expression of our affections as they are evoked when we encounter the True and Living God. This definition raises two significant questions which inform our worship:

1. How well do we know the True and Living God?

A. What is our understanding of God?

B. What is our imagination of God?

2. Are the affections evoked by our knowledge of God worthy of Him?
